This rash, along with low-grade pyrexia, developed in a traveller who returned five days ago from Belize. What is your differential diagnosis? Please supply your answers in an email to kerriganm@nicd.ac.za with 'April Photoquiz' the subject line.

April photoquiz (below)

The correct response was 'bubonic plague', caused by Yersinia pestis. The photograph was taken by Margaretha Isaacson probably during the Lesotho outbreak in 1968 and was provided by Prof John Freaan. The differential diagnosis of a suppurating bubo includes plague, tuberculosis, granuloma inguinale caused by Klebsiella granulomatis, or just simply a polymicrobial abscess.
